

Why Are Fathers Important in a Child's Life?

What is the Calling of a Christian Father

Dads make sure their children are provided for.

Dads commit themselves to be their children's protectors, the chief warriors of the family.

Dads listen to God and they pray for their children.

Dads teach their children skills, and stories and teach them how to pray.

Dads bond with their children early so they can prepare them well for their future adult life.

Dads lovingly value the lives of their children and also the life of their Mom.

Dads are present, they are there to be counted on, even in the most challenging situations.

Dads warn their children of dangers and how to avoid them.

Dads equip their children with armor to fend off evil connivers.

Dads arm their children with truth and wisdom so they can be warriors like themselves.

Dads model how to do life, accept responsibility, reject passivity, and lead courageously.

Dads model how the Christian life is to be lived while remaining humble.

Dads share their own experiences, and what they have learned from failures and from others.

Dads challenge their children when needed.

Dads ask for forgiveness when that is called for.

Dads forgive as they have been forgiven.

Dads allow their children to make some mistakes and learn from them.

Dads point out things. They detect what their children might not notice.

Dads realize they have only so much time with their kids so they seek to make the most of every opportunity to be with and build up their young ones.

Dads share their faith in God, their hope in God, and God's promises to their children.
